

Pacific Region Policy for Community Property States

Married Filing Separately is complicated in community property states because there is often income that must be allocated between the spouses. Unfortunately, state community property laws vary, and some, like California, depend on something almost impossible for a Tax-Aide Counselor to assess, the intent of a separated couple to reconcile.

Furthermore, while the IRS allows Head of Household filing status for couples living apart the last 6 months of the year (“considered unmarried”), this does not alleviate the requirement to allocate community income, at least for the part of the year that the couple lived together.

We will not perform community property income allocation for any taxpayer in Pacific Region.

IRS Code § 66 - Treatment of community income provides for a limited exception to state community property laws -- only for a couple separated and living apart. Because of the complexities of allocating income, Tax-Aide Counselors in a community property state may prepare an MFS or a Head of Household “considered unmarried” return only for a married taxpayer that meets all of the conditions below.

Each Pacific Region community property State/Split State or District may elect to not prepare MFS or full year “considered unmarried” Head of Household returns, regardless of taxpayer separation status. If the State or District Coordinator makes this decision, then no sites in that State/Split State or District may prepare an MFS return.

For Tax Year 2023, the following will be allowed:

State/ Split State	MFS or Head of Household married but living apart full year	HoH living apart only part year
AZ	Yes, follow criteria below	No
CA1	Yes, follow criteria below	No
CA2	Yes, follow criteria below	No
CA3	DC discretion, follow criteria below	No
CA4	DC discretion: counselor certified by TRS; follow criteria below	No
CA5	No MFS. No HoH if married (no “considered unmarried”)	No
NV	No MFS. No HoH if married (no “considered unmarried”)	No

If allowed by the Arizona SC and DC, all six conditions below must be true before a Counselor may prepare an MFS or Head of Household return in a community property state for a married taxpayer: (use as a checklist):

- The taxpayer and spouse lived apart the entire year
- The taxpayer and spouse have not communicated about, or agreed to, an allocation of any community income.
- If taxpayer has earned income, taxpayer and spouse have not transferred, directly or indirectly, any of this earned income before the end of the year (do not consider transfers satisfying child support obligations or transfers of under $100). Taxpayer reports all of this earned income on his/her MFS or Head of Household return.

- The taxpayer reports all his/her social security payments in full.
- The taxpayer reports all his/her 1099R payments in full.
- The taxpayer is willing to report, and does report, all separate and community property interest, dividends, and capital gains on his/her return, with nothing allocated to spouse.
